

I have been made aware of the CBA's attempt to challenge the State of Indiana's do not call list. They are making this claim based on established business idea. I feel that anybody that wants to receive telemarketing calls from any business in which they already have a business relationship, can under the current law. The person simply does not sign up for the list, or they opt-in with their companies. I do not feel this law should be changed. There are many residents in Indiana who do not wish to receive these annoying calls. I know, i used to be a telemarketer. I sincerely hope that the do not call list in Indiana is left alone. There is no good reeason it should be changed.
